

SEEING WHITENESS FOR ANTI-RACIST ACTION

If you are white, serious about raising anti-racist children, and want to grow into a more constructive participant in the Drew mission to build a better, more equitable and just future - this circle is for you!

-Natalie Law Lee, past participant and current Drew parent

Six facilitated, 90-minute sessions for approximately 8-12 Drew parents via Zoom.

Welcoming & judgment free space for open and honest conversation and learning.

Conversation around concepts drawn from BIPOC voices and scholarship, including So You Want to Talk about Race (Ijeoma Oluo) and How to Be Anti-Racist (Ibram X. Kendi), The Racial Healing Handbook (Dr. Annelise Singh) and a weekly practice of listening to black voices. We also use concepts from Robin DiAngelo's White Fragility as a basis for some of our conversations.

In the space between sessions, "home practice" is given in the form of podcasts, video, and articles intended to complement the ongoing practice and muscle building of noticing racial stress and how whiteness works.

Seeing Whiteness is offered to all Drew parents, regardless of financial status. The recommended contribution for the program is $350. Some people pay more, and others pay less or nothing at all. Everyone is welcome.

"My discoveries from the class have helped every day in family, social and even business relationships. I really hope more Drew dads will make the small investment of time to better understand themselves, how they and their families interact with the Drew community and our greater Atlanta community as well. Please invest in yourself and sign up.

-parent Chad Hoffecker

Next cohort starts the week of September 12!

Snap a photo of the QR code to register today.

"I did this program last year with a group of Drew parents and it is absolutely fantastic. High quality content and leaders, and the discussions were very relevant and thought-provoking for how I show up in our school community and elsewhere. 100% recommend."

-parent Lauren Harms